DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. The corrections were received on 6/14/2004. These corrections are acceptable.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

2. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

3. Claims 2 and 4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

4. Claims 2 and 4 recite the limitation "the step of initiating". There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claims.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claims 1-24 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Newton in Encyclopedia of Cryptology.

With regard to claims 1-24, Newton discloses loading into memory a plurality of keys simultaneously to decrypting the previous data frame (page 223, section labeled "priming key"). Newton does not disclose using this method on a computer system. The examiner takes official notice that encryption algorithms are commonly used on computer systems to speed up the encryption of large amounts of data. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to implement Newton's algorithm on a computer to speed up the encryption of large amounts of data. Newton discloses using the previously decrypted letter as a key to decrypt the next letter. When used on a computer, a first key is loaded into memory associated with the first encrypted data frame (letter), and the frame is decrypted simultaneous to the loading of the next key (since it is the same action).

Response to Arguments

7. Applicant's arguments filed 6/14/2004 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant argues that Newton discloses an invention that was developed in the 1500s and can therefore not anticipate the disclosed modern computer method. The method disclosed by Newton is an old cryptographic technique of using the currently decrypted item to decrypt the next item. It is thus loading the next key while decrypting the current letter. In the modern computer age, this would be implemented by using a currently decrypted packet to decrypt the next packet. This would be an obvious way to implement the technique in a modern day computer system. The examiner appreciates that this is not the heart of the disclosed invention, but it does read on the claims. The claims don't specify that the loaded key and the decrypted frame are not the same.

Conclusion

8. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
